Renee M. Pettis
Assistant Inspector General

Roderick Anderson
Deputy Assistant Inspector General

The Office of Management is the OIG's administrative arm. Among its many activities, the office oversees budget development and execution, travel and credit card management, human resources functions, facilities management, and training. These responsibilities are delegated to five program areas:

- Financial management oversees the budget cycle, Federal travel and credit card use, and portions of the strategic planning process;
- Human resources oversees personnel actions, security, employee benefits, work-life issues, and related activities;
- Operations support manages OIG facilities across the United States and Insular Areas, contracting, records management, and telecommunications;
- Procurement and contracts division handles all acquisitions and contracting for the OIG; and
- Training administers the Herndon Leadership Training Center, leadership programs, supervisory and employee development programs, and others.
